We are champions of public transit.

Public transit improves communities, stimulates economies and helps protect our environment. It benefits even those who never use it. We believe that public transit is beyond discretionary, that it is essential. Our claims do not come without detractors, and we must convincingly reiterate that transit, indeed, matters. We are the California Transit Association. We have a powerful story to tell, and now a bold, new brand through which to share it.

If we do not define our brand, others will define it for us. We must be certain about what we stand for and claim it at every touch point.
The role of our association

Our directive is to influence state government in support of public transit systems and the riders they serve. We speak alongside, and on behalf of, our membership base that support the transit industry. We provide a gateway to empower members to speak with a stronger voice, learn through education and training we provide, and collaborate with other similarly minded providers and stakeholders.

Underlying our actions is a core belief that transit’s value extends well beyond moving people from place to place. The spirit in which we advocate for transit is grounded in the idea that with better transit comes better quality of life for all. This is part of our value proposition and it is embedded in everything we do.

The role of our brand

Our brand helps build awareness of our Association’s purpose and value proposition. Consistent delivery of our brand – from the words we use to describe the Association to the presentation of our materials – builds a familiarity with key audiences, allowing us to communicate with greater persuasiveness and clarity.

Our brand is anchored by a strategic position and illuminated by a comprehensive messaging platform and inspiring visual elements. Working together, these brand assets convey our Association – and transit as a whole – in a more significant, contemporary and relevant manner.

The role of our brand guide

This guide documents the strategic, messaging and visual assets that comprise our brand, helping to create a common understanding of our brand among all stakeholders. The guide serves as a tool for the Association’s staff and members to make marketing decisions more autonomously and more efficiently. External resources may reference the guide to accurately implement marketing programs on our behalf. Whether you’ve been a part of our team for years or you’ve recently joined, everyone plays a vital role in bringing the California Transit Association brand to life.
Defining our brand

How we wish our organization to be perceived is articulated in a brand positioning statement. The statement includes a concise description of what makes us unique, the key value we provide and what this allows our audience to achieve. It is intended as a guidepost for our stakeholders, so that everyone is working to promote the Association in the same manner. It is not a public statement, but influences the decisions we make and will ultimately shape how others experience our brand.

Our brand positioning statement

The California Transit Association believes public transit is an essential service that is good for all citizens, communities, economies and overall quality of life. We are known as advocates for public transit resources and for guiding a shared vision among transit agencies. This allows California to develop efficient and effective public transit.
The significance of our claims

By claiming public transit is good for all citizens, communities and economies, we are expanding the role and importance of transit to include non-riders, community stakeholders, businesses and the public at-large. It requires a compelling story to effectively accentuate this to everyone. And that’s what our brand is set up to do. While some people embrace transit as essential, others need to better understand transit’s role or simply need more convincing.

In essence, we are distinguishing and defining our organization as proponents of a cause – the cause of underserved public transit systems – and by doing so we are establishing ourselves on the forefront of the conversation about transit’s true value. This positions our organization, particular in regards to our interactions with the state’s legislature, as proponents for a better society and not simply proponents for those with a vested interest in public transit.

Elevating transit to this degree is both authentic, reflecting the passion found within our organization, and aspirational as we heartily commit to defending and promoting a critical component of our state’s well being.

Our organization is also unique and significant for its ability to facilitate collaboration, to unify transit systems for a stronger voice, and the education and training we provide our membership so that member agencies may learn and grow from each other.

Promoting an expanded value of transit, unifying and strengthening advocacy, teaching others in our industry – this is what our Association is about and this is what our brand is built to represent.

A platform for expression

The process of determining our brand positioning statement included analyzing and documenting the many ways our Association delivers value. These value points support our positioning statement and can serve as key messages (talking points) in our communications. A brand is strengthened when its messages are adopted and broadcasted back by an intended audience. That’s our goal, and it’s realized by consistent delivery of our external messages.
Our tagline

Our tagline embodies the essence of our brand position and is intended for display to external audiences. The Association’s new tagline, Connecting us, works seamlessly with the new visual identity to convey the spirit and purpose of not only our Association, but also transit in general. We connect riders to destinations, communities to economic progress, Association members to lawmakers, industry professionals to like-minded industry professionals. We believe public transit is beyond discretionary – that it is essential – and serves as a vital connection to a better quality of life for all. For proper use of the tagline, Connecting us, always lower case the ‘u’ and include a period at the end.
The new visual language of our brand speaks to the dynamic nature of our organization, the diverse qualities of our membership and the industry collaboration we engender.
Our logo is the most highly visible graphic element of our brand and should be used with great diligence. Contemporary typography combined with swooping geometric shapes present our Association as an active, modern and engaging organization. The converging geometric shapes are emblematic of collaboration and bringing a shared vision of transit together. The logo’s color scheme is intended to bring a balanced emphasis to both California and Transit, and was inspired by hues found throughout our state’s naturally diverse landscapes. While use of the full color logo is preferred, several approved alternates are available for when black and white or one-color application is required.
Clear space / Minimum size

Maintaining the proper distance between our logo and other items allows us to clearly convey our brand’s authority over, or endorsement of, neighboring information. The protected area around the logo should be no less than the height of X — with X being equal to the distance that is measured from the top of the type to the top of the upper blue arc as illustrated here. This space should be protected around the entire perimeter of the logo.

To ensure legibility and brand recognition, the logo should never be reduced to a size smaller than 3/8” measured in height from the base of the logo to the top of the blue geometric shape as illustrated here.

To determine the size of X, measuring the distance between the top of the letters in our name and the top of the upper blue arc shape. Maintain clear space the height and width of X around the entire perimeter of the logo.

Logo minimum size (vertical height) : 3/8”
Consistent use of color will help unify all applications of the brand, connecting them to our logo from which our color palette originates. The hues form a distinctively fresh palette inspired by the natural landscapes of California while maintaining a professional feel appropriate for a trade association.

The primary palette consists of the dominant colors derived from our logo. The secondary palette includes a supporting blue tone, plus a neutral gray. While all four colors may appear within the same application, use color with restraint. Our brand commonly uses color in a supportive manner and frequently as a graphic device (replicating the geometric shapes of logo).

See pages 23–35 for sample layouts demonstrating our brand’s approach to color. Adhere to the color specifications outlined here and use qualified vendors and reliable reproduction methods to ensure color consistency.

Maintaining typeface consistency helps create the distinctive look of our communications. Gotham is our brand’s preferred font for larger, display type such as headlines, subheads and introductory copy. Gotham is a contemporary sans serif font inspired by architectural letterforms found on directional street signs and other public signage of the 1920s. Univers, our brand’s secondary font, complements Gotham and is recommended for body copy and other lengthy text due to its legibility at smaller point sizes.

When to use

Use Gotham and Univers for all California Transit Association printed communications where possible. When use of Gotham or Univers is not possible, use the recommended web typefaces (see page 14).
Typography for web

California Transit Association’s web typefaces are Proxima Nova and Arial. Use Proxima Nova for larger, display type such as headlines, subheads and introductory copy only when Gotham is not available. Use Arial for body copy and other lengthy text only when Univers is not available.

When to use
Situations where Proxima Nova and Univers cannot be used include but are not restricted to: Microsoft PowerPoint, Microsoft Word documents, or HTML content on web applications.

Iconography

A new set of icons has been designed to work in harmony with the new visual language. The default size is 37px and icons should be used with the flat button container. These can be used in any color unless otherwise specified.

When to use
Icons are primarily used in web applications. For more information or for the full set of icons contact the California Transit Association's communication department at (916) 446-4656.
Imagery is a key component in conveying the energy and relevance of an organization. It is an opportunity to reinforce our belief in transit’s ability to improve the quality of life for all. Our photography should speak to the breadth and depth of California’s transportation modes – and do so in a way that is authentic, confident and inspirational.

Consider the following rules of thumb for image selection:

1. As a membership-based organization, photography should accurately reflect the diversity of our transit system members, their modes of transportation and their locales.

2. Image selection should prioritize portraying our members’ public transit systems over stock photography solutions. Stock photography conveying public transit in a non-descript manner is acceptable, but use with restraint. Avoid images of transit systems recognizable as being outside of our state or membership base.

3. Photography style matters. Imagery should feel authentic, but remain simple and uncluttered. Avoid overly posed photos. Consider unique crops or photos taken from interesting perspectives.

In summer 2012, the California Transit Association commissioned original photography throughout California to create a robust image library.
Photography is an important way our brand tells its story. Images connect with people on an emotional level and provide instant context for our communications.
We are moving transit forward and our imagery should reflect the momentum of our organization. Depicting modes of transportation in motion is one way to add energy to our brand. A preferred transit image would include a natural “motion blur” that still allows the audience to understand what is being depicted. Avoid overly hazy or distorted images. Identification of the specific transit system in the photography is permissible, but generally not required.
Images of people are an important way to demonstrate the vitality of public transit in our communities and the role transit plays in people’s lives. Candid shots should be selected to bring a sense of realism to our communications. Consider depth of field and interesting crops for added photographic interest. Similar to our approach with transportation vehicles, images of people in motion support our position as a dynamic association supporting an essential service.
Highlighting the environment or locale of a transportation mode helps to reinforce the convenience and relevance of public transit. It also serves as an opportunity to feature the facilities and environments of our member systems. Environmental photography should convey transit in an uncluttered and positive manner.

The presence of transit riders within the environment brings a human element to the shot, but people are not required for images intended to showcase transit within a specific context.
Public transit is in many ways an unseen industry. The planning, managing and maintaining of transit services – from funding negotiations at the state level to local regulatory compliance to daily vehicular maintenance – play a large role in keeping transit in motion. While these images may not be the expected “face” of transit, they have a place in our brand as a way to reiterate what it means to advocate for, and operate, an essential service.
The graphic elements presented in this guide work together seamlessly to create a bold and unified presentation of our brand. Here’s how it all comes together.
Association business system

Our brand anchors the printed business collateral we use to interact with state government and other industry professionals. Layouts feature our Association logo within a calm, clean design that establishes our brand while naturally reserving areas for content. The geometric shapes from the logo are repeated as a secondary graphic device, adding uniqueness and interest to the layouts. Consistent design application across the collateral system enhances the recognition of, and confidence in, our brand.

Case Closed: A Resounding Victory for Transit Riders

California Supreme Court Rejects State’s Appeal of Lower Court Ruling: Raids on Public Transportation Funding Are Illegal

SACRAMENTO – In a resounding victory for those who provide and those who depend on public transit in California, the State Supreme Court last week rejected the Schwarzenegger Administration’s appeal of a lower court ruling that annual raids on transit funding are illegal. By declining to accept the Petition for Review filed by state officials, the high court upheld the ruling of the Third District Court of Appeal that recent funding diversions violated a series of statutory and constitutional amendments enacted by voters via four statewide initiatives dating back to 1990.

"By denying the state’s appeal, the Supreme Court has affirmed once and for all what we always maintained was true that it’s illegal to shift dedicated state transit funds away from transit agencies and their riders," said Joshua Show, Executive Director of the California Transit Association and lead plaintiff in the case. "This decision validates our position that this practice has been illegal since even before 2007 and that the definition of mass transportation adopted by lawmakers since then to mask these diversions is illegal."

Public transit officials now hope to work with the Administration and Legislature to restore those funds taken since the Association filed the initial lawsuit in October, 2009, on the heels of the 2007-08 state budget package that raided $11 billion from the Public Transportation Account (PTA). Since that agreement, more than $3 billion in transit funding has been re-routed to fill holes in the General Fund.

"This is a clear victory for the millions of Californians who depend every day on public transit to get to work, go to school and access vital health care facilities," said Michael Burns, General Manager of the Santa Clara Valley Transportation Authority and Chair of the Association’s Executive Committee. "Public transit has certainly borne more than its fair share of the budget burden in recent years, and we see the effects of that throughout the state in the form of fare increases, transit service reductions, job layoffs and more. We’re very hopeful that the high court’s decision will now enable us to work with lawmakers to restore these funds and help us to meet the ever-increasing demands for transit services in California."

In its original lawsuit, the Association maintained that several successful ballot measures – from 1990’s Proposition 116 through Proposition 1A of 2006 – established the PTA as a trust fund and required that PTA revenues must be spent on “mass transportation purposes.”

The initial Superior Court decision, issued in January of 2008, ruled that the 2007-08 budget violated the law by diverting $400 million from the PTA to reimburse the General Fund for past debt service payments on Proposition 108 bonds. The ruling declared that the shift “does not serve any transportation planning or mass transportation purpose.” At the same time, however, the Court permitted an additional $773 million transfer from the PTA to cover home-to-school busing and other programs that public transit advocates argued did not meet the definition of “mass transportation” as expressed in Proposition 116, which voters approved with the intent of establishing the PTA as a trust fund to support true public transportation service.
Thank you for joining the California Transit Association!

Here are a few of the many benefits our members receive:

- A voice for California’s public transit industry, as part of our strong, successful lobbying team.
- Our legislative advocacy efforts in Sacramento have been successful in steering increased transit funding.
- Opportunities to guide the future of the transit industry by joining select committees and task forces to help promote and increase transit funding.
- Weekly Executive Director’s Reports, providing the latest industry news, a calendar of events, and legislative updates, updating you on vital state and federal issues, such as transit financing and transit-related legislation which may impact your business.
- The Association’s Annual Membership Directory & Transit Resource Guide.
- Members-only access to the Association’s Web site to view valuable resources and post employment opportunities.
- Webinars: Two to four times per year the Association presents online forums that provide members with detailed reports on issues of concern to public transit providers and suppliers in a real-time, interactive setting.

We look forward to having your organization as one of our valued members.

Sincerely,
